Flaxcombe Rink Wins At Oyen Ladies' 'Spiei

The ladies open bonspiel was played off yesterday, with four club rinks, one local rink and one visiting rink from Flaxcombe, competing.

In the challenge event, Flaxcombe had an easy victory over Mrs. Hans Peterson, and Miss Winnie Love eliminated Mrs. T. Lees in the first round. Flaxcombe hung up another win in the second round, when they secured the long end of the tally in their game with Mrs. Whitlock, and Miss Love defeated Mrs. Arthur Johnson in a closely contested game.

In the third draw, play switched to the consolation event, Mrs. Whitlock defeating Mrs. Lees, and Mrs. Peterson defeating Mrs. A. Johnson.

The final games in each event were played off at 7:30 p.m. In the first draw, the visiting rink from Flaxcombe was Mrs. Leeson, lead; Mrs. Olive Ard 2nd; Mrs. Craig, 3rd and Mrs. Downs, skip.

Most of the games were keenly contested and spectators were given some excellent exhibitions of the roarin' game.

The personnel of the visiting rink from Flaxcombe was Mrs. Leeson, lead; Mrs. Olive Ard 2nd; Mrs. Craig, 3rd and Mrs. Downs, skip.

New Regulations Regarding School Lands

School lands which have reverted to the Crown will be offered for sale once a year and if not sold, the grazing and cultivation rights for the current year will be offered by auction according to regulations recently issued from Ottawa. If the lands are not disposed of at this auction, the permit for grazing or cultivation will be available to the first eligible applicant. The grazing permits on all unsold school lands will not be affected by these changes and will be issued in the customary way.

All Set For Oyen's Tenth Annual 'Spiei

With a very good prize list for the two events in Oyen's tenth annual bonspiel, all that is now required to make the event an outstanding success is a good outside entry and favorable weather. While no official entries have yet been received several clubs have signified their intention to be represented, and a keen interest is being centred on the fine gold watches presented by H. J. Cooper Esq., as first prize in the grand challenge.

Oyen has always enjoyed an excellent reputation for the quality of the prizes offered at their annual 'spiei, and this year will be no exception. With suitable curling weather it is expected that about twenty-two rinks will take part.

British Capital Interested in Alberta Oil Wells

The announcement that a large group of British capital has been interested in acquiring the surplus gas in the Turner Valley Oil and Gas field in Southern Alberta is conveyed in a telegram recently received by Premier Brownlee from Hon. It is pointed out by the Premier that as a result of the activities of Mr. Greenfield's office, there has been in recent years a marked change in the attitude of British capitalists towards investments in Western Canada.

Many New Homesteads Taken Up

The northern frontier of Alberta's agricultural area has been pushed backward to a very marked degree during 1928 according to the report recently issued by the Dominion Lands Administration Branch of the Department of the Interior, Ottawa. Of the 8,698 homesteads filed on in Alberta during the year, 4,563 were in the Peace River district. Corresponding figures for 1927 are 2,725 homesteads filed on in the province of which 1,135 were in the Peace River. In this respect Alberta shows greater activity than either of the other prairie provinces. In Saskatchewan, 5,493 homesteads were taken up in 1928, as compared with 2,819 in 1927 and Manitoba shows a decrease from 699 in 1927 to 620 in 1928.

Allowing 160 acres to each claim, Alberta's area of occupied farms has thus been increased some 1,391,680 acres in 1928.

Lace Making Old Art

Lace making was invented in the year 1561 at St. Annaberg, in Saxony, by Barbara Uttman. The first establishment of lace manufacture in England is said to date to some refugees from Flanders, who settled in the village of Oatlands, in the west of the county of Bedford, adjoining Buckinghamshire.

Covered Chest and Throat. Healed by Cuticura.

My clothing aggravated the breaking out on my chest, and the irritation prevented me from sleeping. The trouble lasted about three weeks.

"I tried several remedies without helping me. I began using Cuticura Soap and Ointment and after applying them once I felt much relief, and in about two weeks I was completely healed." (Signed) Harry McCormack, New York, through Mr. H. J. June 22, 1928.

Use Cuticura to heal skin troubles. Soap the affected skin with Cuticura Soap. Rub Cuticura Ointment on the affected skin. It will stop itching, burning, and itching. It will stop itching, burning, and itching. It will stop itching, burning, and itching.

BLEEDING GUMS

From their color which health varies from a light pink to a dark pink, you would know at once that the gum tissues are richly supplied with blood.

Nature has planned it so purposefully to give the oral tissues high regenerative powers, subject to the daily to minor injuries and scrapings during the mastication of food.

Normally, gum tissues are firm and resistant, and will tolerate much abuse, without bleeding. But should there be an undue tendency of the gums to bleed, this condition should be taken as a warning sign that something is wrong, and the family dentist consulted forthwith.

What then may be amiss? Obviously these tissues are not in health, this being further manifested by a change in color from pink to red, or to a purplish tinge, evidencing severe congestion.

Furthermore, the gingivae may be swollen, or scaly, slightly shrunken from their crests, thus in the early stage of gingival disease, visible inflammation of the gums and a tendency to bleed readily may not be present.

Perhaps the first intimation you have had of this condition was when a piece of food, performing its mouthful, you noticed blood welling up from the gums, or the blood in your teeth. So you sensed, and rightly, that the source of this hemorrhage was the "pockets" underlying the free gum margin.

But why here? The gum and gingival tissues are protected by a comparatively thin epithelial covering, but which becomes progressively thinner as it fits into the side of the pocket, and in its deepest part, this covering is extremely light, or may be absent altogether.

Here, then, is the most vulnerable point of attack on the part of the disease bearing organisms, which, through some cause, set up a mild degenerative process, the subsequent breaking down of the cell structures and exposure and washing of the blood vessel walls. So that with this condition present, the blood vessels in the weakened areas is sufficient to cause a healthy oral tissue.

There always is a reason for bleeding gums.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

MARCH 3

THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH

Golden Text: "He who, who are many, are one body in Christ."—Romans 12:5.

Lesson: Matthew 10:1-39; Mark 4:26-32; Romans 12:4-8; Ephesians 4:1-16; 11:22-24; 14:1-16; 15:22-27; 16:1-16.

Devotional Reading: Ephesians 4:1-16.

Explanations and Comments

The Christian Church is a Growing Church. Mark 4:26-32.—And the Kingdom of God is as it is a Kingdom of God; that is, what you see as Jesus said and by the power of His Kingdom, He has implanted the word of God in the hearts of men. The Kingdom of God is as it is a Kingdom of God; that is, what you see as Jesus said and by the power of His Kingdom, He has implanted the word of God in the hearts of men.

"Flower in the crannied wall,"

"I pluck you out of the crannied wall; Hold you here, root and all, in my hand."

"Little flower—but if I could un-derstand, What you are, root and all and all in all."

I should know what God and man is,—Tennyson.

The earth beareth fruit of herself.

"We plough the fields and scatter, The good seed sown by God's hand; But it is He that makes them grow."

The growth of the plant is gradual but marked by progressive stages:—

"Noting grain is produced suddenly, not even a grape or a fig. If I say to me that you are a grape or a fig now, I will answer you that you are not a grape or a fig now. Let it flower first, then it will put forth its fruit, and then ripen. And would you have the fruit of a man's life and character all in a moment? Do not expect it!"—Epictetus.

"The Kingdom of God, then, is a growth. It begins with a seed, it grows on to the harvest. In this growth are three necessary elements; first, the beginning, the point of departure; second, a goal, a terminus; and third, the pathway between the beginning and the goal, leading from one to the other. This is the law of progress in all things."

"The pathway between the beginning and the goal, leading from one to the other. This is the law of progress in all things."

PROOF OF DYES is in the dyeing

Words won't dye a dress, or coat, or sweater. It takes real skill to do that. That's why Diamond Dyes contain from three to five times more color than any other dye by actual test.

It's the aniline in Diamond Dyes that do the work; that give the colors such brilliancy; such depth and permanency. It's real skill that keeps them from giving things that redden, fade, or run from spotting or staining.

Next time you're dyeing to do, try Diamond Dyes. Then compare results. See how soft, how rich, how permanent the colors are. Or how they keep their brilliancy. Your dealer will refund your money if you don't agree Diamond Dyes are better dyes.

The white package of Diamond Dyes is the original "all-purpose" dye for any and every kind of material. It will dye or set silk, wool, cotton, linen, rayon or any kind of material. The blue package is a special dye, for silk or wool only. With it you can dye your valuable articles of silk or wool with results equal to the finest professional work. When you buy—remember this. The blue package dyes silk or wool only. The white package dyes every kind of goods, including silk and wool. Your dealer has both packages.

Castoria is a comfort when Baby is fretful. No sooner taken than the little drowsy being is peacefully asleep. No harm done for Castoria is a baby remedy, meant for babies. Perfectly safe to give the youngest infant; you know the doctors' word for that! It is a vegetable product and you could use it every day, that is, in an emergency or colic pains or other suffering. HACHING LOGS

On the third day of Donald's convalescence he was able to leave his cabin. With his arm in a sling, his face patched with plaster, he made the rounds of the mill.

The men welcomed him with eager nods and smiles, many coming forward to shake his hand in mutual respect. The big plant was now going at full blast. Belts clattered, logs thudded, planers snored loudly, and the great saw ripped shrilly through the big logs in a raising crescendo of sound.

At the siding an engine humped noisily into a long string of flat-cars piled high with lumber. With arms akimbo, his wet under-shirt clinging to his powerful torso, the mop of blond hair hanging damp on his brow, Gillis stood surveying the heavily-laden cars with an air of complacency. The lumber handlers sat about in positions of weariness, napping their hot faces.

Gillis looked cheerfully as Donald approached.

"Good news for you, Donnie," he said.

"What is it, Jack?"

"Last load for the big steamer," replied Gillis, as he pointed at the moving train.

"We're on time, then," cried Donald gleefully.

"One day ahead," corrected Gillis. The engineer came to the cab window as the engine passed, and bestowed his congratulations by shaking hands with himself. The train gathered speed, and as the caboose rattled by, the conductor came to the rear platform.

"Good work, boys!" he shouted.

The wood hatching the trails until it struck the down grade and disappeared through the cut.

"Well, that's over," observed Gillis, as he sat down heavily and wiped the sweat from his face. He looked tired and worn, but the light of victory shone in his eyes.

"If it hadn't been for you, Jack," said Donald earnestly, "we would not have got out of here today."

You look all in; you'd better have a good sleep."

The big mill's eyes brightened at Donald's praise.

"You don't look like you'd been in a Sunday school picnic," replied Gillis with a chuckle.

As Donald walked up the hill the whistle blew for the non-hour, and the men gathered out on the way to the dining-room. Backle left the ranks and walked shamefacedly to the engine side.

"I'm sorry for the part I took in the strike, boys, I—"

"It's all right, Backle," interrupted Donald, "you more than made up for it. We'll forget all that."

As the men were relieved of their duties, Gillis gave his usual friendly grin.

Meals in logging camps are eaten in sheltered woods, a feast for the purpose. It is a business to be handled with as hurriedly as possible. From the time the men are seated until the chairs are put on their way, the clatter of dishes and an occasional "pass the butter" are the only sounds.

As Donald moved to his place at the table the men arose and clapped their hands. Someone called for a cheer, but Donald laughingly held up his hand.

"Men, I can't find words to tell you how much I appreciate your good work. Your long hours of labor enabled the Company to get an important order away on time, thereby saving their prestige in a big East coast market. You will receive double pay for every hour you worked during the week."

A low murmur of applause followed this welcome announcement.

After lunch, feeling the need of exercise, Donald made his way slowly toward the hill. The severe morning and the days in bed had weakened him to such an extent that he was forced to take frequent rests. At the foot of the hill, in the trail, Hans and the man with whom Andy had fought crawled stealthily from the bush, looked furtively about them, then followed Donald down the hill. He reached the open glade by the mill's foot to find Connie seated on the rippling stream, her chin resting in cupped hands, and staring dreamily into the flowing water.

"Ah!" he cried gaily, "I've caught my little dried up rat over here."

At the sound of his voice Connie sprang to her feet, her heart racing madly. Hearing a sound behind him, Donald turned to find the eyes of the forest cat in a malevolent stare. The glade that chilled him to the marrow for a short interval the "dried up rat" of the Indian held his as though with a hypnotic power.

"Where?" he ejaculated, as the Bear hobbled down the trail, "your guardian spirit does give me an

Donald stirred as Andy applied the water, and his one good eye opened slowly. "Did I win?" he questioned weakly.

"Well, your guess is right, you see," then Donald's gaze rested on Connie like a hawk. He reached for her hand and held it in a firm pressure. "Good little sport," he whispered through split lips.

Connie felt as though her heart would burst. Scorching tears ran down her face, and it was with the utmost difficulty that she controlled the suffocating sobs that tilted her head.

"What's that?" asked Donald, attempting to sit up.

"The engineer is celebrating, Donnie. The men 'ave returned to work. The strike is broken."

"Ah!" sighed Donald happily as he felt back on the pillows.

"The distant hum of a gun car gradually increased to a series of thuds to explosions, then died out suddenly. They heard the light rumble of wheels as it drew to a stop at the station below. There was the sound of quick foot-steps on the boardwalk and the door opened to admit Dr. Paul. He crossed the room and took Donald's hand. "Is it true," he asked incredulously, "that you whipped Ole Head?"

"Strike me pink if I didn't," Andy vouchsafed.

"I have patched up Hans's victim's many times," the doctor stated, "but this is the first time that I have attended his victim, and I can assure you that it's a pleasure." He removed his coat and rolled up his sleeves. "I'll look you over," he added, then glanced significantly at Connie who rose and left the room.

"A couple of cracked ribs, a fractured ulna, and a few hundred bruises," was the doctor's verdict a few minutes later.

The physician's deft hands soon bandaged the broken ribs and set the bone of the forearm.

"I'll go and patch up the fallen bully. I hope he's worse still," he chuckled as he left the room.

Andy stepped to the door and called in Connie.

"Don't look so frightened, Connie," smiled Donald. "I don't feel half as bad as I look."

"I'll have to go now," she said in a voice choked with emotion.

Andy accompanied her outside the door. "Ave a bite to eat, Connie?" he invited.

Connie shook her head. Now that the excitement was over, the strain of the emotion she had experienced showed in the dark shadows under her eyes and in the drop of her right shoulder. "Andy," she began as she placed a small hand on his arm, "you—won't say anything what—what I—"

A flood of rose dyed her tanned cheeks and her eyes fell in embarrassment. Andy patted her shoulder reassuringly.

"I'll never say a blinikin word, Connie; an oyster's got the nut on me," Connie, visibly relieved, picked up her gun and started up the hill. Andy watched the pathetic little figure until she disappeared in the woods. For a moment he stood staring into nothingness, then shaking his head sadly, he entered the cabin.

"Only a little trick, Andy," Donald spoke warmly from his bed.

Andy glared at him. "Brick!" he repeated sarcastically. "Is that all? You big, home-headed blundering fool! He slammed the door as he went out to give emphasis to the remark.

"What the devil does he mean?" puzzled Donald. He turned painfully to his side, yawned equally as painfully, then fell into a sound sleep.

The Battle of January:

January was a momentous month for wheat producers the world over. Canadian farmers had delivered nearly four hundred million bushels of wheat. Argentina and Australia were commencing the delivery of unusually large crops. There was an immense visible supply of wheat. The market commenced to sag. The one optimistic feature in a rather gloomy picture was the Canadian Wheat Pool. Just what the Pool stood for is told in candid language by George Broadbent, the British grain authority, in "Milling".

"Prices were put down on the plea that Argentina must sell more of her new crop, and, in fact, shippers did put out lower offers, and some Canadian sellers followed the downward lead.

"But it was soon found that the Canadian Pool refused to offer or sell at the lower prices, and, of course, this gave Argentine shippers courage to work for a reaction.

"The action of the Canadian Pool also gave buyers confidence, and they not only found they needed wheat, but that they could pay better rates for it.

"As long as sellers were willing to "cut" prices, buyers were quite prepared to stand back and let them do still more "cutting," and quite possibly their might have been a bad slump had not the Canadian Pool taken a strong stand.

"The Canadian Pool Managers

certainly deserve credit for courageous handling of a difficult situation, and their action proves that farmer members of the Pool would not agree to low prices at this period of the season.

"The lesson of the price movements of wheat in the past week is that emphasis must be given to the power of strong holders to maintain prices.

"Past experience showed that a crowd of weak holders was almost at the mercy of buyers in times of plenty.

"I think all must now recognize the commanding position of the Canadian Pool and the readiness of Argentine shippers to follow a strong upward lead."

Many New School

Districts Organized

Fifty-six new school districts were organized in Alberta during 1928 bringing the total number of districts in the province up to 3,497. The enrolment of pupils during the year shows a gain of 4,705 and the total enrolment is now approximately 100,000. Eighty-one new one-room schools and thirteen new two-room schools were built in country and village districts.

An outstanding feature of the Department of Education is the marked increase in the number of students enrolled for technical education, enrolment in the Institute of Technology at Calgary having reached a total of 1,745. Approximately 500 new students were enrolled during the year for correspondence courses. Over 1,000 more pupils wrote the department examinations than in any previous year. In the high school grades, their success is shown by the fact that of all the units written 75.19 per cent. were passed successfully.

Wade Wins at Hanna 'Spil

Art Wade and his crew were successful in lifting the Plunkett and Savage Trophy at the Hanna 'Spil last week, and each member of the rink got a very fine mantle clock. After a poor start in the first competition they curled consistently and hung up five wins in a row to secure the fine trophy and prizes. The personnel of the rink was Jim Connors (Hanna) lead, Howard Wade, 2nd, Father Lynett, 3rd, and Art Wade (himself), skip.

George Morrison and his boys who fared so well at the Hanna 'Spil last year, did not go so well this year, and returned without any of the crockery. All speak very highly of the hospitality of the Hanna citizens and the way in which the 'spil was conducted. Thirty-two rinks were entered.
